From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Our town has heroes, too

Over at Thistle Ridge they're always boasting about their local heroes—ancestors in the Revolutionary War, congressmen, and an artist with pictures in the Metropolitan Museum. Well, we've got our local heroes, too...

There was old Doc Turner, who fought for years against the intolerance and bigotry that kept children from being vaccinated in our country.

And Deacon Follensby, who fought for free pews in the churches; Jess Hackney, who campaigned for teaching honest history in schools; Weld Towers, who fought the enforcement of Prohibition in our county and persuaded fellow citizens to want tolerance and moderation in place of a return to lawlessness.

You won't find monuments to these folks. But from where I sit, they're heroes in a cause that's pretty sacred in our town—the cause of freedom, tolerance, and human dignity.

Bootleggers Take Trip Into Texas

Fantastic Experiences Are Their Portion.

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—The legendary loss of a kingdom for want of a nail for a horse's shoe was not more fantastic than the consequences of two Mexican bootleggers' light-hearted trip into Texas with three ponies loaded with liquor and an unsuspected supercargo.

Here's what resulted from the two ponies' trip across the Mexican border the night of April 28:

A total of 75,000 acres in four Texas counties are under rigid quarantine. Nearly 25,000 head of livestock must be completely dipped in an antiseptic solution every two weeks for a period of five to nine months. None of the livestock—including thousands of head of beef cattle—can be moved or sold during the quarantine. Ranchmen, the four counties, and the state have been put to a cost restlessly described as "extremely high and most regrettable."

Among authorities concerned with the incident are the United States marshal, federal immigration officers, inspectors of the bureau of animal husbandry, the state sanitary livestock commission, and brand inspectors of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association.

All this trouble stemmed, not from the bootleg liquor, but from the little stowaways on the ponies—the dread fever ticks which spread disease and are a menace to the health of livestock where they are found.

The three infested ponies dropped mature ticks wherever they went during their 10-day jaunt through the counties of Webb, Zapata, Duval, and Jim Hogg, thus exposing to infection all the livestock in that area.

The Mexicans were captured en route home by immigration men. Discovering that the ponies were infested with ticks, the federal and state livestock sanitary officials. The Mexicans then led the owners over the route they had followed on their "little business trip" into Texas.

Under the policy of the Texas livestock sanitary commission a tick quarantine is imposed not only on all pastures traversed by tick-infested animals but on all adjacent pasture lands.

Tar Travels Half Around Globe to Save Brother

HARTFORD, CONN. — A sailor who traveled nearly half-way around the world won commutation of a death sentence to life imprisonment for a brother he said he hadn't "seen in years."

In an unprecedented second hearing before the state board of pardons, Seaman I/c Roger Peterson, 19, made an eloquent plea for the life of Royal S. Peterson, 21, who was to have died for the first degree murder of Matthew Wier, Manchester jeweler.

A previous plea by Royal Peterson for commutation was denied by the board, chairman of which is Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, himself a naval lieutenant in the First World War.

Deputies discovered a relative of Clifton's had sold the barn and the new owner was taking it away in chunks and reconstructing it on his own property. Clifton was managing the property where the barn stood and didn't know it had been sold.

COCKLAW DANGER TO ALL FARM LIVESTOCK

Everyone knows that the poison of cobra snakes can cause quick death. But most farmers do not know that a tiny germ, shaped like a drum stick, kills thousands of farm animals with a poison a hundred times more powerful than cobra venom. This is the invisible germ of tetanus or lockjaw, which lives in the soil, especially on fertilized farms.

The poison if the lockjaw germ is generated after the germ gains entrance to the body through a wound, usually of the puncture type. Horses often contract lockjaw from stepping on rusty nails or other sharp objects. New-born pigs, foals, and lambs frequently die from lockjaw because the raw navel stump contacts the tetanus germ in solid bedding or contaminated earth. Heavy losses from tetanus also follow the common farm operations of castrating and docking. In the case of castrating, the germ enters the wound through the use of dirty knives and turning the pigs to clean pens. This also applies to freshly docked lambs.

In the northern states such a high percentage of lockjaw cases is fatal that livestock owners should concentrate on prevention rather than cure. Timely use of antitoxin or tetanus toxoid is the most practical insurance against this fatal disease.
